Dear Dental Board and AHPRA,

I am a retired orthodontist 73 years "young"

I continue to offer my skills to the Adelaide Dental Hospital, and tutor 3 Postgraduate students from the University of Adelaide most Friday afternoons.

I am appalled to see general dental practitioners attempting to practise "orthodontic" treatment after completing short "motel" courses.

This year I am in Washington DC for the American Association of Orthodontists meeting, and will attend the European Orthodontic Society meeting in Edinburgh, Scotland.

I intend to "up stumps" in December 2018, and consider there to be an orthodontic manpower surplus in Australia.

I also believe that patient orthodontic care is consistently better, if delivered by a fully qualified orthodontist.

Please do NOT make changes to the current situation, unless they improve patient welfare.

Yours sincerely,

Michael Harry. BDS, BDSc(Hons), MDS, FRACDS
